

NewsFeature

Greeley-Evans | Weld County School District 6

Above, Greeley West High School senior James Lozano leads the “No Place for Hate” student assembly on May 1, and, below, helps with the raising of a banner in the school’s gym.

Greeley West Designated as a ‘No Place for Hate’ School

May 11, 2009 – A coalition of students, led by Greeley West High School senior James Lozano, saw their year-long work culminate in the hoisting of a “No Place for Hate” banner in the school’s gymnasium on May 1.

The students worked on numerous projects emphasizing the need for respect and consideration of others. These projects included classroom presentations, elementary-school visits, and a compilation of stories to be bound into a book highlighting student experiences with discrimination and how everyone can make a difference. The year-long project resulted in a school-wide assembly during which the student body watched a “No Place for Hate” presentation and saw the unveiling of the banner, which will be displayed each year as the challenge for respect continues.

